Hoop Waist Latest Vogue in Borneo Where Hoop Skirt Would Be Curiosity

"RINGS on her fingers and bells on her toes" is the costume of native Borneo, where well dressed women wear gowns of rattan, or reeds, interwoven with coins. These rattan hoops extend from shoulder to hip, and a fringed petticoat edged with tinkling bells reaches to her knees. A high silver comb ornaments her hair, and she is further bejeweled with rings, armlets, necklaces and filigreed earrings mounted on scarlet cloth.

Borneo women do not perform heavy manual labor like their Malaysian sisters, and kapok picking is their chief work. Kapok is a fibrous material much like cotton, which grows in pods on tall trees. The seed is extracted by pushing the cotton through a pair of rollers, pulling away the fibre by hand.

Medical missions which American Protestant churches through the Interchurch World Movement propose to establish in Borneo, may threaten the existence of the corset-like rattan. The Interchurch World Movement believes medical work to be the forerunner of evangelization in Malaysia, where missionaries are just beginning to reach the pagan Dyaks, or head hunters, of Borneo.

Plans have been made through the Interchurch World Movement for the establishment of sixteen hospitals in Dutch Borneo and three hospitals in British Borneo.

Poet's Lofty Position.
Among the British men of prominence probably the one who most frequently refused money was Robert Browning, the poet. During the last twenty-five years of his life editors offered large sums for a short poem from his pen. But Browning said "No." He told his friends when they pointed out the unwisdom of this course that he was determined not to thrust his poems down the throats of people; that if they wanted to read him they could buy his books.

That said petition will be presented and come on for hearing before the Judge of the said Lake Circuit Court, sitting at the Court House in Crown Point, Indiana, on the 14th day of June, 1920, at nine o'clock A. M. or as soon thereafter as the same can be heard.

GOSTLIN MEYN & COMPANY,
Petitioner.

Witness the hand of the Clerk of said court and the seal thereof, this 18th day of May, 1920.

HERBERT L. WHEATON,
(Seal), Clerk of the Lake Circuit Court.

Deputy.
